High School's Students With Medical Conditions: Covering Pre-Clinical Exposure

A front-page article in the Bay Area News Group discusses California's implementation of the Senate Bill (SB-56), which was recently introduced. The bill aims to improve children's quality of, and access to, health care, the article says. The bill will address health equity for these groups.

Additional resources and updates can be found on the California Department of Health Care Services website.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A policy cheat sheet from the Center for Health Care Strategies explores several CalAIM initiatives that specifically affect seniors and people with disabilities, including the implementation of the federal Civil Right Protections for those with disabilities. The article says.

The article also discusses the development of a patient-reported outcomes measure designed to improve children's quality of care and activities-of-daily-living support to live at home. However, due to a shrinking pool of available home health care workers and narrow state resources, the option to pay family caregivers for their children's medical labor is gaining national traction. This practice is known as paid family caregiving and is under consideration in several states.

The webinar will provide a brief overview of laws that govern care for this population and then spotlight specific models of paid family caregiving and the opportunities they present to address health equity for these populations. The authors will be joined by speakers from the California Children's Services Coalition and the California Children's Hospice & Palliative Care Coalition, Children's Hospice & Palliative Care Coalition of California, and the CSU Shiley Haynes Institute for Palliative Care.

The webinar will be held on Tuesday, February 21, from 12 to 1 p.m. Pacific Time.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Program officials, policy makers, and advocates.
